What Do Y'all Do In There?

A little boy was born and raised next door to a church. As a curious toddler he would look out their living room window every Sunday as worshippers entered the church building. As he grew older, his mother allowed him to open the front door and wave as people headed to service. As the years went by the child became a constant fixture for those who worshipped there. He increasingly engaged them each Sunday as he aged. By the age of three he stood bravely on the porch. At four he had moved down to the walkway. At five he had progressed to the edge of their yard, where he stood waving and smiling each Sunday. Then one Sunday he decided to take his bravest step of all. His curiosity had gotten the best of him, so he bravely walked up to an elderly gentleman he had greeted often since his days of peering out of their living room window and asked, "Mister, what do ya'll do in there?" Hearing this question, the elderly gentlemen wept because now he knew that although the child lived next to the church, sadly he did not know why people went there.
